Philadelphia International Medicine's website is now available in 35 languages.

Philadelphia – Philadelphia International Medicine has just introduced a translation tool on its website that allows visitors to view each page in one of 35 languages.

The translation tool marked “Languages,” is found in the top right corner of PIM’s homepage. By clicking on the tool users are able to select the language of their choice and have the entire website translated instantaneously. International patients can search for physicians and healthcare services, and they are able to view each a summary of the doctor’s training, research and clinical specialty. Each specialist has an international practice and accepts new patients.

PIM President and CEO Leonard Karp said, “We are happy to offer one more option for our patients and their families who would feel more comfortable reading about treatment options in their native language.” The list of 35 languages range from: Arabic, Portuguese, Chinese, Korean, Russian, French, and many more. Please note that all appointment requests, inquiries and medical records submitted for review must be in English.

Appointments can be made by writing physicians@philadelphiamedicine.com or calling +001 215 575 3724. Also, a visitor information section provides information on Philadelphia attractions, travel and locations of other amenities. The translated site also includes information on clinical and hospital management training and educational programs offered by the PIM Institute of Education, as well hospital consulting and management services offered through Philadelphia International Medicine Management & Development, PIM’s affiliated organization. You can find out more about PIM through its Website at www.philadelphiamedicine.com.
